have called on the public during the year. The Christmas ree for poor children was held in City Hail, December 24th, heing the third time we have collected the little once together for this purpose. One hundred and forty children were present many of them accompanied by their parents. A nice supper was served to all, the children receiving suitable presents together with the usual packages of popicorn and caudy. Three large trees were required for the bestowal of the gitts, be side large pyramids at the foot of each tree, and when all was completed they presented an attractive sight to the erger and expectant children. Those who had charge of the arrangements felt it was more blessed to give than to receive, in witnessing the joy that prevailed. There is not half enough of human sunshine in the world, if there were there would be less of crime, less of an, more of truth, goodness and purity. A very good enter tainment was given them, and Christmas fully explained, so that the youngest child could understand. We slucerely hope this arrangement for giving the poor children of our city of Christmas rememberses will arrangement for giving the poor children of our city a Christmas remembrance will

By invitation of the Crusade and Bangor Union, the State Convention of the W C I U met here the first week in October A very large number of delegates and visitors were present, in fact, it being the largest convention held since the organization, every County in the State being well represented. The convention lasted three days, the meetings being held in the Rev Dr Field's church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and motions for the occasion. Mayor Nealley welcomed them to the city in an eloquent address, and Rev A S Ladd, in behalf of the churches. The citizens very generously opened their homes for free entertainment. I think all were impressed with the cordial welcome extended, the free ride through our city, given them by Lemuel Nichols, proprietor of the Grand Central Stables, showing Bangor in her brillman autumnal diess, left impressions that our city was not only noted for generousity and hospitality, but gallantry as well. The daily papers gave full reports of each meeting.

The New York Times declares that the outlook for the Republicans is very dubi ous We should like to know just where the Times discovers these dublous indications Certainly not in the elections list fall when the Republicans made magnificent gains in every part of the country The fact is the Republicans were never in better condition to enter a campaign than they are to day. No doubt the Torses le dublous over the outlook, but the Republi-CADS are very far from it

The New York World says Carter Hirrison's letter of declination contains a f w observations, that are startling in their caudor Referring to certain charges against him he says 'Not a newspaper in (hicago is willing to set me right There 18 but one thing for me to do I cannot afford to be elected Mayor nuder such (ircumstances | The truth of this is appear ent to any logical mind. It is equally clear that if the accused man knew he charges to be false he could abundantly afford to be elected Mayor even if every paper in the city opposed him. The pub-lic, both in Chicago and elsewhere, will accept the unanimous opposition of he press as prima facte evidence of an overwhelming case against the present Mayor He could easily stem the tide of persecution, but the resterated truth is a different

The London St James Gazette pays the following high compliment to the skill and ability of American yachtsmen "To cross the Atlantic in fourteen days in atrociously bad weather without losing a spár o sall is not a bad piece of seamanship. This 18 the feat accomplished by the Coronet, and it proves once more that the Yankees know how to sall their yachts as well as how to build them. The owner and crew of the Coronet may be congratulated on their performance, but their victory over the Dauntless is somewhat discounted by the weather. The loser in the race was smaller by over 100 tons than her animgonist, and in heavy seas such as occasionally poured tons of water on board, size is an element that tells seriously. There is oo doubt, however, that both yachta are fine vessels. If the Americans prefer to race along their coasts in skimming dist es, it is not from any inability to build keefed boats, which can go to see with our own Dest orn sers."

Michigan elects, next Monday, two judges of the Supreme Court and two legents of he State University, and votes on the proh bitory amendment .

C vil Service Reform League have made a report on the present condition of the reform movement and if such extracts as we have seen are correct it is most certainly a remarkable document Referring to the Administra ion the report cites extracts from the public utterances of the President and says it is clearly unreasonable to infer therefrom that the principles of reform as understood by the league would be uniformly and consistently observed, or that the practicability of applying those sor, and that he vill be chosen on the Irst ized by any fulr interpretation of his In the New Jersey Assembly the other words the extravagant expectation these professionals beat around the bush, but finally admit that President Cleveland the Indiana L gislature refused to bay is anything out a reformer, skihough they full conviction of the President, although doubtless not so intended. Stripped of its verbiage the report shows first that the blance of lift in the farce

The Rhode Island Election

As the campaign in Rhode Island ad vances, the prospect of the Republicans electing their ticket by an emphatic ma jority continues to improve This must necessarily be so Governor Withnore righly deserves to be returned and never theless is being opposed by all the arts 45 that malignity can suggest to mendacity The Providence Journal naturally brings to its apostacy a great deal of ardor is leading the crusade against an official who has filled the Executive chair with marked fidelly and efficiency, and whose private life, I ke his public record, is with out a stain lo assume that the majority of the voters of Rhode Island are going to send Governor Wetmore to the rear and elect publican than the Republican candidate John W Day s, the Democratic candidate, in his place, is to discredit their sagicity, -is to discredit their apprecultion of what they one to good government. The rea sons which the Journal presents for its treachery to the Republican ticket are flimsey ones It calls for (rovernor Wet more's defeat because of "the May deal," but absolutel ; fails to sconnect him with "the deal ' If the Journal knew that the much of the criticisms it has felt obliged been guilty of making or had been party occasioned by his inconsistences and direc- would be certain to expose the transaction convict it of inconsistency and ins accrity it is only necessary to point to the signifi cant fact that the Democrat whom it is The Republicans of the entire country

A great bargain linguise of 5 PF MIL Those "Republicans" who are striving to Massachusetts created so much trouble smash the Republican party in order to Mas-achusetts created so much trouble among the faithful that the Postmaster General Iclicalled upon to offer an aplanation of the causes that lead to this action. The chief reason issigned semined to be that the postmaster voted for eleveland in 1884, and jet it is daily asserted that the President never makes use of the offices to reward his friends.

The New York Lemin, Post cities as proof of the popularity of Mr. Strauss recently appointed Minister to Jurkey that he is being congratulated by Democratis and Mugwumps and that his papers were and Mugwumps and that his papers were garded as a compliment to the new Mirister from a Mugwump standpoint, as Mr. Gorman has been repeatedly reviled as a spoilsman of the first water.

The freight house was a contract than it hereby n the track. The freight house in ruins. For a short time it ic as if the entire south end of the town would be totally destroyed but at 2 o'clock fire was under control and was confir the fire was ander control and was confined to the fre gbt house and its centents. The roofs of several adjoining belidings were on fire at different times but were not permitted to get headway. It was generally thought that the Chicopee Hetel and depot must go, but the wind shifted at the opportune moment and this probably saved them.

The loss to the Connecticut River Railroad Company from the burning of the freight house, damage to ears, etc., will probably foot up about $15,000. Samuel Blaiadell & Co. had $3,000 worth of cotton waste in the house which was burred but not insured. The Dwight Manufacturing Company had some cotton in the buildin which was all burned and various me chants had more or less merchandles de-stroyed. The loss will amount to $25,000, or more. charge of the police force.

We received a call last evening, from Mr. F. W. McViear, who is the New England representative of the Chemical ammoniate & Oil Co., of New York, of which the absconding Lawton was Manager. Mr. McVlcar returned last evening from a visit to New York where he had an interview with the Treasurer of the Company, Mr. R. W. Kirkland, who was erroneous ly reported to have followed the absconding Manager, and from him he learned some interesting facts regarding the Company and its condition. We learn from Mr. McVicar that Lawton has gone to South America and not to Canada or England as has been supposed. It is also with him the vast amount of wealth which has been reported.

It is not known, however, what the full amount of Lawton's embezzlement is, nor how much he has saited down in one way or another in prepuration for his flight. The company owns several large fuctories and an island in New York harbor for which an offer of $309,000 has been made, but which is now under attachment by creditors. It is stated that four or five banks in New York city have offered to advance the funds to the smount of $400,-000 to put the Company on its feet again. They first propose, however, to settle with their creditors in good faith and to the extent of their ability. Sixty cents on

ON THE BRIME.

John found that the life of a South African farmer came well up to his expectations. He had ample occupation; indeed, what hotween estriches, horses, cattle, sheep and crops, he was rather over than under occupied. Nor, was he greatly broubled by the lack of civilized society, for he was a man who read a great deal; and books could be ordered from Durban and Cape Town, while the weekly mail brought up an ample surply of papers. On Sundays he always read the political articles in The Saturday Review should to di Silas Croft, who, as he got ejder, found that the print tried his eyes, and this was an attention that the old gentleman greatly appreciated. He was a well informed man, and had, notwithstanding his long life spent in a half civilized country, never cet his hold of affairs or his interest in the wide and rishing life of the world in one of whose side eddies he lived apart. This task of reading The Saturday Review about had formerly been a part of Bessie's Sunday service, but her uncle was very glad to effect an exchange. Bessie's mind was not quite in tune with the profundities of that journal, and her attention was apt to wander at the most pointed passages. And thus it came about, Ayer's Satsaparilla has effected, in our city, many most remarkable cures, in cases which bailed the efforts of the most experienced physicians. Were it ecessary, I could give the names of many individuals who have been cured by taking this medicine. In my case it has worked wonders, relieving me of being troubled with it for years. In and all other diseases arising from the blood, there is no remedy with h I am acquainted, that affords such ief as Ayer's Sarsaparilis.—R. H. wrence, M. D., Baltimore, Md. Ayer's Sarsaparilla oured me of Gout and Rheumatism, when nothing else yould. It has eradicated every trace of issease from my system.—R. H. Short, danager Hotel Belmont, Lowell, Mass. change. Bessle's mind wis not quite in time with the profundities of that journal, and her attention was apt to wander at the most pointed passages. And thus it came about, what between The Saturday Roview and other things, that a very warm und deep attachment spring up betwixt the old man and his younger partner. John was a very taking man, especially to the old, for whom he was never tired of performing little services. One of his favorite sayings was that old people should be "flet form leasy," and he sended up to it. Moreover, there was a quiet joil by and a bluff honesty about him which was undoubtedly attractive both to men and women. But his great recommendation was that he was a well informed, experienced man and a gentleman in a country in which both were rare. Every week the old man get to rely more and more on him, and let thin 2 pass more and more into his hands. "I'm getting old, Neil, 'he said to him one night; "I'm getting very o'd; the grasshopper is becoming a burden to me, and I'll have to be a son to me, as my dear Bessie has been a daughter."

John looked up into the kindly, handsome old face, crowned with the frings of snowy hair, and at the two keen eyes get deep in it. CHAPTER XI.

ON THE BRINK,

or of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," etc

John looked up into the kindly, handsome old face, crowned with the frings of snowy hair, and at tho two keen eyes set deep in it beheath the overhanging eyebrows, and thought of his old father who was long since dead; and somehow he was moved and his own eyes filled with tears.

"Ay, Mr. Croft," he said, taking the old man'e hand, "that I will to the best of my abdity."

own syes listed with tears.

"Ay, Mr. Croft," he said, taking the old man's hand, "that I will to the best of my ability."

"Thank you, my boy, thank you. I don't like talking much about these things, but as I said, I am getting old, and the Almightly may require my account any day, and if he does I rely on you to look after these two girs. It is a wild country this, and one never knows what may happen in it from day to diff, and they will want it. Sometimes I wish I were clear of the place. And now I'm going to bed. I am beginning to feel as though I had done my day's work in the worl. I'm getting feelbe, John, that is the fact of it."

After that he alwayscalled him John, Of Jess they heard but little. She iwrote every week, it is true, and gave an accumate account of all that was going on at Pretoria and of her daily doings, but she was bene of those people whose letters tell one absolutely nothing of themselves and of what is passing in their minds. They might as well have been headed "Ohy Pretoria Letter," as Bessic said, disgustedly, after reading three sheets in Jess' curjous, upright handwriting. "Ones you lose sight of Jess," she went on, "she might as well be deanf for all you carn about her. Not that ohe learns very nuch when she is with que," she added, reflect valy.

"She is a peculiar woman," said John, thoughtfully. At first he had missed her very much, for, peculiar as she undoubtedly was, she had touched a new string in him somewhere, of the existence of which he had not till then been himself aware. And what is mor, it had answered pretty strongly for some time; but now it was slowly vibrating itself it to slence again, much as I. harp does when the striker takes his fingers from the strings. Had she stayed on another week or so the effect might have been more enduring. But although less had gone away Bessic and not. On the contrary she was always when the striker takes his fingers from the strings. Had she stayed on another week or so the effect might have been more enduring. But although Jess had gone away Bessic had not. On the contrary, she was always about him, surrounding him with that tender care a woman, however involuntarily; cannot given the property of the man she lives. Her beauty moved about the placelike a beam of light about a gurden, for she was indeed a lovely woman and as pure and good as she was levely. Now could John long remain in ignorance of her partiality for him. He was not a vain man—rery much the reverse; indeed—but neither was he a food. And it must be said that, though Bessig never overstepped the bounds of maidenly reserve inched—but neither was he a food. And it must be said that, though reserve inched—but neither was he a food. And it must be said that, though session were overstepped the bounds of maidenly reserve inched—but neither was he a food. And it has be said that, though reserve inched—but neither was he a food. And it has be said that, though session better the reverse; indeed, but also strong to permit of her doing so. Not that she was animated by the half divine, soul scaring breath of passion, such as animated her sister—which is a very rare thing, and, take it altogether, as undesirable and unsuitable to the ordinary conditions of this proade and work a day life as it is rare—but she was tenderly and truly in love affer the ordinary young women by fusition; indeed, her passion, measured by the every day standard, would have proved to be a deep one. However this was, she was undoubtedly prepared to make John Niel a faithful and a loving wife if he choos to ask her, to become so.

And as the weeks went on—though, of course, he knew nothing of all tile—its he-come so.

And as the weeks went on—though, of course, he knew nothing of all tile—it became a very serious question to John whether he should not six her. It is not good for man to live alone, especially in the Transvaal, and it was not possible for him to passday by day at the side of so much beauty and so much graces without thinking that it would be well-to-draw the bond of union closer. Indeed, had John been a younger nam or had less experience he would have succumbed to the temptation much soomer than he did. But he was neither very young nor very inexperienced. Ten years or more area, in his green enced. was neither very young nor very inexperienced. Ten years or more ago, in his green and gushing youth, he had, as has been said, burned his fingers pretty sharply, and a lively recollection of this incident in his career had heretofore proved a very efficient warning to him. Also, he had got to that period of life when ruen think a great many times before they wildly commit themselves to the deep matrimonial vaters. But, however commendably cautipus a man may be, he is always liable to be thrown into temptation sufficiently strong to sweep away his caution and make a mockery of his plans. However strong the rope, it has its breaking strain; and in the same way our power of resistance to any given course depends entirely upon the power of the temptation to draw us into it. And so it was destined to be with our friend John Niel.

Niel.

It was about a week after his conversation with old Bilas Croft that it occurred to John that Bessie's manner had grown rather strange of late. It seemed to him that ahe had avoided his society instead of, if not courting it, at the state the strange of of late. It seemed to him that she had avoided his society instead of, if not courting it, at least showing a certain partiality for it. Also, she had been looking pate and worried and ovinced a tendency to irritation that was quite foreign to her anthral sweetness of disposition. Now, when a person on whom one is accustomed to depend for most of that social intercourse and those pleasant little social intercourse and those pleasant little and the state of the sex value from another, sudden y cuts off the supply without any apparent ripme or reason, it is enough to induce a fealing of wonder, not to say of vexation, in the breast. It haver occurred to John that the reason might be that Bessis was truly fond of him, and perhaps unconsciously disappointed that he did not show a warmer interest in her. If, however, we were to examine into the facts of the case we should probably discover that this was the real explanation of the change. Bessie was a straightforward young woman, whose mind and purposes were as clear as running water. She was vexed with John, though she would probably not have owned it even to here! I in so many words, and her manner reflected the equidition of the raind.

"Bessie," and John one lovely day, just as in so many words, and her manner reflected the condition of her mind.

"Bessie," and John one lovely day, just as the afternoon was merging into evening—"Bessie," and John one lovely day, just as the afternoon was merging into evening—Bessie, he always called her Bessie now—"I am going down to the black waitle plantation by the hig mealle patch; I want to see how those young trees are doing. If you have done your cooking—for Hessie had been engaged in making a cake, as young ladies, to their sours heathin, often have to do in the colonies—"I wish you would put on your hat and come with ma. I don't believe that you have been out to day."

"Thank you, Cipic Mel.," nawwered Bessie, and come with ma. I don't believe that you have been out to day."

"Thank you, Cipic Mel.," nawwered Bessie, will have how to assume, "thesik you, but I think I had rather not go out walling. This was what she said, out her eyes added, "I am offensed with you." I want to have nothing to do with you.

"Year, wall," and John these the supplement.

Bessle locked through the open kitchen door at the lights and shadows that chased each other across the swelling bosom of the hill behind the house.

"It certainly is very fine," she said; "are you going far?"

"No, only round the plantation."

"There are so many puff adders down there, and I hat enaker, "suggested Bessie, by way of finding another excuss for not corning.

"Oh, Pil lock after the puff adders—come along."

"Ob, I'll look arter use pun some mone,"

"Well," she said at last, "I will come, not because I' want to come, but because you have overpersunded me! I don't know wha; has come to me," she added, with a little stamp and a sudden filling of her blue eyes with tears, "I do not seem to have any will of my own left. When I want to do one thing and jyou want me to do another, it is I who have to do what you want; and I tell you I don't like it, Capt. Niel, and I shall be very cross out walking," and she sweept past him, on her way to fetch her last, in that peculiarly graceful way that angry women can some never saw a more charming or taking lady in Europe or out of it.

He had half a mind to risk it and ask her to marry him. But then, perhaps, she might refuse him, and that was an idea that he dicnot quite take to. After our first youth few men aitogether relish the idea of putting themselves in a position that gives capricious woman an opportunity of first figuratively jumping on them, and then perhaps holding them up to the: scorn and oblequy of her friends, relations and other admirars. For, unfortunately, until the opposite is clearly demonstrated, many men are apt to believe that not a few women are by nature capricious, shallow and unreliable; and John Niel, owing, possibly, to that unhappy little experience of his youth, must be reckoned among their misguided ranks.
